Yoga for Worrying

t is easy to let worrying take up your time and make you unhappy. There are so many things to worry about in life – from small things like not having the money to buy things you want or worrying about upsetting someone, to much bigger problems like a sentencing decision. What a lot of worrying situations have in common is that they're very difficult (or perhaps impossible) to change. However, we can always change our attitude to what is going on. Yoga helps to do that.

Through this routine, keep your breathing calm, deep and slow. If you can calm your breathing, your mind will soon follow. Pay attention to each breath. Enjoy the time you spend in these positions.

8. Sitting

As you sit like this, be aware of your breathing. Let your breath be slow and unforced. As you breathe in, count up to five or six, or even seven. And when you breathe out, make the out-breath the same length. Keep going with each in-breath and each out-breath the same length. Continue for five minutes, gently bringing your attention back to the breath whenever it wanders away.

Stay for 20 breaths, or longer if you like.

For help with your yoga and meditation, write to The PPT, PO Box 328, Oxford OX2 7HF

Flow up and down 3 times. The 3rd time you go up, stay up and hold for 5 slow breaths.